Selected Publications

As a tenured professor in UNC's professional tenure track, I am expected to produce professional media rather than academic publications. My publications are un-refereed, but many have won top journalism awards. My work is focused on producing online multimedia projects in-state and abroad, and my specialty is in short form documentary films. The projects are collaborative and interdisciplinary, as we often work with international universities and other UNC centers.

As executive producer, producer, and story editor for these projects, I conceive the project, drive the content focus, guide the selection and development of stories in multiple mediums, help edit films, supervise a team of professional coaches, and supervise student teams. Some of these projects require more than a year commitment and could be compared to producing a television show, a documentary film, or a book.

Student Honors

2001- Present

Hearst Collegiate Journalism Competition

For more than a decade, UNC Viscom has consistently placed in the top 3 nationally in Photo and Multimedia intercollegiate championships, winning first in photo and second in multimedia again this year. We have also been dominant in the individual championships. For example, Carolyn Van Houten is the first person to ever win both championships in successive years. Our students have won multiple individual awards and have been champions, finalists and semifinalists multiple times, and again this year we have four qualified for the semifinals.

College Photographer of the Year Competition

From 2013-2016, UNC has won more multimedia awards in CPoY than any other program in the world. College Photographer of the Year, along with the Hearst, is considered the premier college photojournalism contest in the world.

Our students have won awards in virtually every major student and multimedia competition in the nation, and many in professional competitions as well. Pictures of the Year International, The Best of Photojournalism, The Webby Awards, Horizon Interactive, The Online News Association, Society for News Design, Atlanta Photojournalism Seminar, The South Short Course for News Photography, and The North Carolina Press Photographers Association are but a few.

Students have won national and state Photographer of the Year honors. Students have been selected for prestigious workshops, such as the Eddie Adams Workshop, been named to select lists, such as "The Top 100 Collegiate Journalists in America," and have landed internships and jobs at dozens of premiere newspapers and magazines.

Graduate students theses have won top professional awards for photography and multimedia, including Josh Davis, Nacho Corbella, Eileen Mignoni, and Nathan Clendenin.
